

Sweet Calontir

Words and Music: Andrixos Seljukroctonis

Where are the songs that re - mind me of home? Where are the fields that I used to roam?

Where are my com-rades, my loved ones so dear? They're all back at home in sweet Ca-lon - tir.

*Where are the songs that remind me of home?
Where are the fields that I used to roam?
Where are my comrades, my loved ones so dear?
They're all back at home in sweet Calontir.*

Where is the mason who built the great wall?
Scarce has he ever missed clarion's call.
He'll never know how we stand or we fall,
'Til he hears tales of glory in Valor's meadhall.

Chorus

Where is fray's marshall, the bard of Blackmoor?
Singing the lyrics of slaughter's red score.
Leading the death-dance as we march to the fore.
Oh what does he sing of now rather than war?

Chorus

Where are the war-kings who once battles planned
Each one in turn summoned Falcon war band
Five score grim warriors, fierce death in their hand s But now Counts, Earls and Dukes stay home guarding their lands.

Chorus

Where are the huscarls who slaughter-joy share?
Ariel, William, the proud Eichmann pair,
Alric, Mihangle, what's that badge that you wear?
As we marched off to battle, I thought you'd be there.

*So sing me a song that reminds me of home
Tell of the fields that I used to roam
I missed all my comrades, my loved ones so dear.
They're all back at home in Sweet Calontir.*

Rule Number One:

As the author of this work does not wish this piece sung from a lyrics-sheet, please do not print it in a font larger than 10 point. Please ensure that this statement accompanies all copies of these lyrics that you make.